Proponent Testimony on HB2021
Senate Committee on Judiciary
March 8, 2023 @ 10:30a

Chair Warren, Vice Chair Wilborn, Ranking Member Corson and Members of the Committee my name is Kristalle Hedrick, I serve as the Vice President of Kansas Programs with FosterAdopt Connect (FAC). I obtained my Bachelor's Degree in Social Work in 2006 and Master's Degree in Social Work in 2008. Since this time, I have held a variety of positions with contracted child welfare agencies supporting children and their families who have been impacted by foster care. I was also a foster parent, and have had the privilege of adopting from foster care in Kansas.

During my time as a foster parent, our family took a placement of a sibling group of three ages 15, 12, and 2. The kids were in care due to allegations of abuse and neglect and the conditions of their home. These kids loved their parents, and were terrified to leave their home and family. When DCF was at the home with law enforcement the 15-year-old, a boy, began posturing and was throwing his pocket knife into a tree that happened to be relatively close to the DCF worker. Against the recommendations of our workers we took placement of all three kids, even the angry 15-year-old boy. We certainly slept with one eye open the first night, but we felt prepared to help support him through that anger and develop some healthier ways to express his frustration. He and his siblings ultimately went to reside with an aunt, where they safely remained until they reached permanency.

Fast forward a year, I was a Permanency Director in Southeast Kansas. My primary role was to support our team of child welfare professionals as they walked alongside families to help them heal, improve their circumstances, and provide a safe environment for their children to return home to. During my time in that role, we had a case in which a teen girl and her mother murdered a member of the community and conspired to do the same to their foster care case manager. I never imagined the support I would be offering to my staff would be sitting beside them as they met with detectives and law enforcement to make plans for keeping themselves and their own families safe. I also never imagined having to ask another worker to step into that role, and continue providing services to this juvenile offender and her mother.

Another year later, I was the Director of Adoption Services for the Eastern half of the state. I was in my office in Topeka when a peer rushed in asking for help. There was a young man downstairs who staff believed to have a firearm in his hoodie. My peer, the Permanency Director, presented me with two options – would you like to sit in the room with the youth or help get staff and other kids/families out of the building? I sat in a room with this youth for over 20 minutes waiting on law enforcement, whose office was less than 2 blocks away, to arrive and offer support.

In 2019, in Kansas City KS one of my staff members was assaulted by a teen boy who was awaiting placement in an office. When law enforcement arrived it took four officers to detain him. He attempted to gain access to their firearms and other defense tools, and it took several minutes for the officers to get him safely handcuffed and in their vehicle. Only hours after the initial assault to the foster care case manager who was on call at the time, Juvenile Intake called after they processed him, they were ready to release him back into her care.

There is a difference between a 15-year-old boy who is angry and scared to be moved away from his home and family and a young woman who has murdered another human, and has very intentional plans to kill another. Or a young man who is physically attacking and overwhelming a team of four trained law enforcement officers. Our child welfare workforce, and foster parents, are trained and equipped to help youth navigate through trauma and walk alongside them to develop healthier ways to cope. Our child welfare workforce, and our foster families are not equipped to deal with young people who are committing felony level crimes. Our child welfare system is not designed to serve youth with criminal behaviors and our state's most vulnerable children who have experienced abused and neglected and are in foster care to no fault of their own. Asking our workforce, and our foster families to serve both of these populations simultaneously as the system currently exists is to ask the impossible.

Being one of the first states to take advantage of the Family First Prevention Services Act, our state is well-positioned to be a leader in family well-being and prioritizing the safety of our children. But we must take action, the child welfare system is not able to meet the needs of youth with criminogenic cognitive distortions and conduct disorder diagnoses without additional resources and support from the law enforcement and corrections community.
