

Repeal of Firearms Prohibitions

HB 2013 repeals five statutes pertaining to the sale and purchase of certain firearms known as long-guns. The statutes are no longer needed in order to conform to a 1934 federal law that was changed in 1986. The statutes repealed by the bill placed restrictions on buying and selling long-gun firearms to states that were contiguous to Kansas as originally required by a 1934 federal law. The 1986 federal law allows interstate sales to any other state by following federal rules and regulations.
