

SESSION OF 2016

SUPPLEMENTAL NOTE ON HOUSE BILL NO. 2490

As Amended by Senate Committee on Natural Resources

Brief***

HB 2490 would add the definition of the term “toxicant” to the definitions of the Plant Pest Act. Under the bill, the term “toxicant” would mean any chemical, including agricultural chemicals which, if present in unsafe levels, can render a plant or plant product unsafe for human or animal consumption. The definition of the term “plant pest” would be amended to include “toxicant” and to include anything “which can cause a threat to public health.”

The bill would grant additional authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to quarantine the state or parts of the state when it is necessary to contain a plant pest for the protection of public health. New authority also would be given to the Secretary to prevent the spread of a plant pest through quarantine into the state through its movement or transportation.

Background

The bill was introduced at the request of a spokesperson from the Kansas Department of Agriculture. At the hearing on the bill before the House Committee on Agriculture and Natural Resources, a spokesperson for the agency indicated that in the event of a plant pest or disease outbreak, the bill would allow the agency to act more rapidly to stop the spread of the plant pest, which is critical to the agricultural industry.

Also appearing in support of the bill was a spokesperson for the Kansas Grain and Feed Association, Kansas Cooperative Council, and the Kansas Agribusiness Retailers Association. There were no neutral or opponent conferees.

The Senate Committee on Natural Resources amended the bill by striking "or any biological substance" from the definition of "toxicant."

The fiscal note on the bill prepared by the Division of the Budget on the bill as introduced indicates there would be no fiscal impact associated with the enactment of the bill.
